What makes a POEM a poem?

Is a jump-rope rhyme a poem?
What about the lyrics of your favorite song, or even a song that parents sign to children?

Once you start looking for poems, you’ll find that they are all around you. You may even have written some yourself!

What makes a POEM a poem?

Poetry is everywhere...

Song lyrics

Greeting-card messages

Commercial jingles...
What makes a POEM a poem?

You might describe some poems as clever, others as inspiring, And still others as sappy.

Every so often, though, you MIGHT encounter a poem that gets inside your heart and mind.
How does a poem do that?

Let's continue on to find out...
Part 1: What Makes Poetry Different?

• One difference between poetry and prose has to do with structure, or the way a poem looks on the page.

  • While short stories and news articles consist of sentences and paragraphs, poems are made up of lines.

  • A line can be a single word, a sentence, or part of a sentence.

  • In many poems, lines are arranged into groups called stanzas.
Part 1: What Makes Poetry Different?

• Poetry is different from prose in another way.
  • Poetry sounds different from prose, as you'll see when you read the poem, A Find Head of Lettuce, with all its rhymes and bouncy rhythms.
  • As you will also see, poems have speakers and the speaker may not be the poet.
A Fine Head of Lettuce
Poem by Jack Prelutsky

I'm a fine head of lettuce,
a handsome romaine.
I haven't a cranium made for a brain.

I'm simple and shy.
I remain on my own.
I'm known in the garden
as lettuce alone.

STUDY THE POEM
1. Who is the speaker?
2. How many stanzas does the poem have?
3. How many lines are in each stanza?
4. What words rhyme in this poem? Is there a pattern to the rhymes?
5. Poets like playing with words. What verbal joke do you find in the last line?
MODEL: STRUCTURE, SPEAKER, AND SOUNDS

The poem “Losing Face” is more serious than “A Find Head of Lettuce.” The poem sounds different too – more like conversation. It doesn’t have the bouncy rhythm and comic rhymes of the lettuce poem. Read Wong’s poem aloud.

Losing Face
Poem by Janet S. Wong

Finally Mother is proud of something I have done.
“My girl won the art contest,” she tells the world, smiling so big and laughing so loud her gold tooth shows.

I’m the only one who knows how I drew so well, erasing the perfect lines I traced, drawing worse ones on purpose in their place.

I feel awful. I want to tell.

But I don’t want to lose Mother’s glowing proud face.

1. Who is the speaker of this poem? Describe the conflict she is having.
2. Where does Wong use rhyme in the first stanza?
3. The poem is structured so that each stanza helps you understand the speaker’s feelings. In your own words, summarize what each stanza is about.
4. Reread the boxed section. It is the only space where each line contains a complete sentence. Why might the poet have chosen to emphasize these lines?
5. Reread the last stanza. Why doesn’t the speaker want to admit what she’s done?
Part 2: What Are the Elements of Poetry?

Think about the comforting melody of a lullaby, the contagious beat of a certain song, or those few words in a poem that perfectly capture how you’re feeling.

The power of a poem comes from more than its structure and its speaker.

Sound devices, imagery, and figurative language are the elements that can make a poem unforgettable.

SOUND DEVICES
Poets use sound devices to make music and to emphasize ideas.

| Rhyme is the repetition of accented vowel sounds, as in thing and sing, cry and sky. | Some people talk and talk and never say a thing.
| Meter and Rhythm | Some people look at you and birds begin to sing.
| Meter is a more or less regular pattern of stressed and unstressed syllables. Rhythm is a musical quality created by the alternation of accented and unaccented syllables. | Some people laugh and laugh and yet you want to cry.
| Alliteration | Some people touch your hand and music fills the sky. |
| Alliteration is the repetition of consonant sounds in words that are close together, such as the s in makes still pools, and sleep-song. | —“People” by Charlotte Zolotow |
| Refrain | The refrain in these lines suggests the steady downpour. The alliteration mimics the rain’s soothing sounds. |
| Refrain is a word or line that is repeated in a poem to create a certain effect, such as the phrase the rain. | The rain makes still pools on the sidewalk. |
| | The rain makes running pools in the gutter. |
| | The rain plays a little sleep-song on our roof at night—|
| | And I love the rain. |
| | —from “April Rain Song” by Langston Hughes |
Model 1: Rhyme, Rhythm, & Refrain

In “Pete at the Zoo,” a young speaker considers an important question: Do zoo animals ever get lonely? Read the poem aloud, playing particular attention to the use of rhymes and rhythms.

Pete at the Zoo

I wonder if the elephant
Is lonely in his stall
When all the boys and girls are gone
And there’s no shout at all,
And there’s no one to stamp before,
No one to note his might.
Does he hunch up, as I do,
Against the dark of night?

1. Which words rhyme at the ends of the lines?
2. Stressed and unstressed syllables are marked in lines 1-2. Read these lines aloud, emphasizing the stressed words.
3. What does repetition of words and phrases in the boxed lines help to emphasize about nighttime at the zoo?
What kinds of sounds do you associate with fireworks? In this poem, meter and alliteration help you to hear some of these sounds.

Fireworks
Poem by Valerie Worth

First
A far thud,
Then the rocket
Climbs the air,
A dull red flare,
To hang, a moment,
Invisible, before
Its shut black shell cracks
And claps against the ears,
Breaks and billows into bloom,
Spilling down clear green sparks, gold spears,
Silent sliding silver waterfalls and stars.

1. Does this poem sound like conversation, or is it written in meter — a regular pattern of stressed and unstressed syllables?

2. What sounds are repeated in the boxed line to create alliteration? Where does the poet use onomatopoeia — words that sound like what they mean — to help you hear the fireworks?

Read the poem aloud to get the full effect.
Figurative Language and Imagery
Figurative language is the use of imaginative comparisons to help you see the world in new ways.
Figurative language is NOT literally true.
Four common “figures of speech” are:
- Simile
- Metaphor
- Personification
- Hyperbole

Images use sensory language to appeal to your senses
  - sight, hearing, smell, taste, and touch

Figures of speech often create images.
Figurative Language & Imagery

SIMILE
Simile is a comparison between two unlike things that includes the word like or as.

In a high wind the leaves don't fall but fly straight out of the tree like birds.

——“Poem” by A. R. Ammons

METAPHOR
Metaphor is a comparison between two unlike things that does not include the word like or as.

The fallen leaves are cornflakes That fill the lawn’s wide dish.

——from “December Leaves” by Kaye Starbird

PERSONIFICATION
Personification is a description of an object, an animal, or an idea as if it were human or had human qualities.

New sounds to walk on today, dry leaves talking in hoarse whispers under bare trees.

——“New Sounds” by Lilian Moore

HYPERBOLE
Hyperbole is a figure of speech that uses exaggeration to create a special effect.

He turns and drags half the lake out after him.

——“Mooses” by Ted Hughes
Eve Merriam will transport you to a familiar scene – a dinner table.

Merriam uses many of the techniques you just learned about to help you visualize the scene and understand the speaker’s relationship with his or her parents.
LIKE BOOKENDS

Like bookends
my father at one side
my mother at the other propping me up
but unable to read
What I feel.

Were they born with clothes on?
Born with rules on?

When we sit at the dinner table
we smooth our napkins into polite folds.
How was your day dear
Fine
And how was your dear
Fine
And how was school
The same

Only once in a while when we’re not trying so hard when we’re not trying at all our napkins suddenly whirl away and we float up to the ceiling where we sing and dance until it hurts from laughing and then we float down with our napkin parachutes and once again spoon our soup and pass the bread please.
